No Need for Credit Card to Download Thousands of Software, Games and Ringtones

CAMPBELL, Calif., January 18, 2005—Eliminating the need to use a credit card to download the latest software, games and ringtones, American Wireless, through its network of dealers, has introduced Retail Extension Services (RES) prepaid mobile content cards. Available for use with cellphones, smartphones, PDAs and Blackberry's, thousands of titles beginning at 99 cents can be accessed online using a prepaid card purchased at an American Wireless dealer.

"There are many people without a credit card or wary of using their credit card online," said Bruce Hallinan, director of prepaid services for American Wireless. "RES prepaid mobile content cards are the perfect solution for customers wanting to access these types of products as well as dealers looking to increase store traffic and ultimately increase sales."

RES prepaid offers choices for all types of users such as a powerful database for your Palm or Windows CE-based mobile device, the latest ringtones or web viewers and applications for your Blackberry without ever having to use a credit card. Applications for personal finance, education, medical, exercise and diet, maps, travel and business can all be accessed via the mobile content card from an American Wireless dealer.

"American Wireless dealers now have an offering that makes it easy for their customers to add applications and fun to their mobile devices," said Bill Tauskey, CEO of RES. "RES offers access to the largest selection of on-line content for cellphones, smartphones, PDA's and Blackberry devices. Once the cards are purchased at an American Wireless dealer, users can make their selection and download them from <http://www.RESprepaid.com>."
